Property Listing Job for Hempstead County Should Go to Outside Appraisal Firm

The taxing units of Hempstead county are at this moment debating how to proceed with the appraisal program which is a "must" in the plan to bring property assessments up to 18% of actual value — which, in turn, is another "must" if the taxing units are to avoid being short-changed in state aid when the day of reckoning arrives August 1, 1958.

The basic question is whether to use out of state or Arkansas appraisers in making the property survey — and this newspaper advises the taxing units and the people who support them to demand that outside appraisers be employed.

Counties with the most successful record in equalizing assessments have employed outside appraisers. On the other hand, the taxing units of Hempstead county tried a local setup two years ago with an initial outlay of $16,000. It would have been better, we know today, to have spent several times that amount and brought in an entire organization from the outside.

There is this to be said for a high-priced appraisal conducted by non-local people:

It sets up an impartial, fact-finding report that can't be challenged as to truthfulness — and against which the performance of our public officials will be checked for years to come.

It is a firm foundation designed to stabilize the shifting politics of Arkansas' unfortunate constitutional ad valorem assessment system — county officials elected for mere two-year terms, an elective tax assessor, and an equalization board equally subject to the varying winds that blow across every local political landscape.

The taxing units of Hempstead county have a special obligation to see that this outside appraisal is authorized at this time because not only will they face the loss of a certain percentage of state aid if they fail to measure up to the 18% assessing level by August 1, 1958, but also their anticipation of 3% sales tax revenue is going to be cut off when the people vote the tax down to 2% in the general election in November 1958.

The taxing units, furthermore, are under immediate pressure to support the assessment equalization program because the people are aroused over abuse of the millage rate — and in the future the millage will fall instead of rising. There is, then, no other route left to the taxing units but this one — to support the assessment equalization program.

Anyone in his right senses knows that you can't ask for higher assessments and higher millage at one and the same time, but this is precisely what was asked in some districts around the state. During this writer's 25-county campaign to refer the increase in the state sales tax from 2 to 3% the complaint he heard most often was:

"They increase assessments, and then increase the millage, and then increase the sales tax, too — they grabbed everything in sight!"

It is this newspaper's long-time policy to press for assessment equalization and to regard all other measures as simply efforts to scuttle this reform.

We demonstrated that in the local school election early this year when, following Hempstead's initial attempt to reform assessments, we urged the people to defeat a 5-mill tax increase (which they did) — and later in the spring this writer launched the successful campaign to put the 1-cent increase in the sales tax on the general election ballot.

If you believe in justice, in good government, and a basically sound public school system, you will demand that an organization of outside appraisers be brought into Hempstead county.

Teamsters Board Denies Charge, Assures Cleanup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The executive board of the Teamsters Union denied AFL-CIO charges today that the Teamsters are dominated by corrupt influences. But it promised to start a clean-up drive at the annual convention starting in Miami Beach, Fla., on Sept. 30.

The Teamsters answer to the AFL-CIO charges was given in the three-page statement handed to newsmen just before executive board members went before the AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee for a hearing.

The closed, two-day hearing at AFL-CIO headquarters was almost an hour late getting started.

Teamster President Dave Beck, his heir apparent, Vice President James R. Hoffa, and eight other top Teamster officials attended.

The AFL-CIO accusers were based largely on accusations by the Senate Rackets Committee that Beck used union funds for his own personal profit and that Hoffa gained power with the help of gangsters and racketeers.

The Teamsters high command said the union has more than 800 locals, 5,000 local officers and 1,500,000 members and "no group of individuals can so dominate its affairs" to justify charges of corrupt domination.

Ike Denies Any U.S. Plot to Arrest Faubus

Spikes Report Given Out by the Governor

NEWPORT, R. I., (UPI) — President Eisenhower's headquarters said today it is "not correct" that federal authorities have discussed the possibility of taking Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas into custody in the Little Rock school integration case.

"That rumor is not correct," said White House press secretary James C. Hagerty in commenting on a telegram Faubus sent to the President last night.

Hagerty also said there is no truth to what he called another report "to the effect that U. S. marshals or their deputies have been ordered to escort Negro children to school" in Little Rock.

In his telegram to Eisenhower the Arkansas governor said he had been "reliably informed that federal authorities in Little Rock have this day been discussing plans to take into custody by force the hand of a sovereign state."

Faubus urged the President to see that no effort is made toward any such action.

"Asked whether there had been any discussion by federal authorities in Washington or anywhere else about the possibility of trying to take Faubus into custody, Hagerty replied:

"There has been no discussion in Little Rock or Washington or any place else."

Eisenhower arrived here from Washington yesterday for the start of an extended vacation mixed with work. He got a new report regarding the situation in Little Rock before going this morning to the Newport Country Club for a round of golf.

Hagerty told a news conference the Faubus telegram to Eisenhower was delivered to the White House in Washington at 1:15 a.m. today — after the governor had Continued on Page Three

Bulletin

WASHINGTON (INS) — Federal authorities said today a subpoena possibly might be served on Gov. Orval Faubus demanding that he "show cause" why he should not be prevented from using troops to block school desegregation in Little Rock, Ark.

This possibility was considered as Justice Department officials conferred throughout the day on legal steps to be taken following the FBI's investigation of Faubus' actions which have blocked integration of Little Rock's Central High school despite a court order.

At the same time, the Justice Department and the Pentagon also were reported studying the question of whether the Arkansas National Guard, deployed around the school and the governor's mansion, could be "federalized" by presidential order. This would place the troops under direct control from Washington.

Negro Students Fail to Show Up Third Day

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Armed National Guardsmen called out to prevent integration at Central High School today tried to break up a New York newspaperman's interview with persons in a shouting, turbulent segregationist crowd.

It was the third morning that hundreds of whites had appeared in front of the school in apparent support of Gov. Orval Faubus' conflict with a federal court order to integrate the 2,600-pupil white school immediately.

None of the nine Negroes, who were turned away by the cold steel of Guardsmen yesterday, showed up this morning.

Six Negroes, identifying themselves as Arkansas Baptist College students, were escorted from the school area. They said they came to the school to see what was happening.

"I told them, 'It'll be a long time around here and the other way,'" said one of the whites.

The Negroes complied.

The ever-changing racial picture here took a new turn in the last 12 hours as Faubus charged that the federal government was plotting to arrest him.

President Eisenhower, now vacationing at Newport, R. I., said Faubus' allegation was "not correct."

The governor was not immediately available for comment.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said there was no discussion in Little Rock or Washington or any place else concerning an arrest of the governor.

Today Hagerty also said in Newport that there is no truth to what he called another report "to the effect that U. S. marshals or their deputies have been ordered to escort Negro children to school here."

Rice Farmers Hear Benson at Stuttgart

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson told Arkansas Rice farmers today that "we cannot legislate American agriculture into prosperity."

In a speech prepared for delivery, Benson said the real issue in farm policy is this:

"We are going to seek prosperity for agriculture through expanding markets at home and abroad. Or are we going to try to guarantee farmers their income by government-restricted production and income-raising subsidies."

Benson's answer was that while "we must have programs to help farmers to help themselves but it would be the worst kind of folly to freeze our economy and try to make every farm profitable by means of a government check."

To the rice growers of the area, the secretary said their problems was to price and promote the grain to sell.

"Rice, like any other commodity must be competitive, price-wise, quality-wise and promotion-wise," he said.

Troops here this morning tried to break up interviews Ben Fine of the New York Times was holding with the crowd. Fine said a colonel whom he could not immediately identify told him that, "If you do that again, you'll have to leave" referring to interviews. Demonstrators shouted, "He's from the North. He doesn't want the truth." Fine continued his interviews until the colonel personally escorted him across the street and onto the campus. Maj. Gen. Sherman T. Clinger later called a press conference behind National Guard lines to warn newsmen: "You'll be arrested and fined if you do anything that might be inciting a breach of the peace." The crowd cheered lustily when Clinger, the state adjutant general, called the press conference. The Guard was called out Monday night when U. S. District Judge Ronald N. Davies ordered Central High integrated. He repeated the order yesterday. Up to 270 armed Guardsmen—under the command of Gov. Faubus and not federal military authorities—have remained on the campus since Monday. In his telegram to the President last night, Faubus urged Eisenhower to take action that would halt the threat of "interference of federal agents" in the question of whether Negroes and whites shall attend classes together at the Little Rock high school. He said also that he had "reliable information that 'federal

'Humdrum' Lawyer, Says Judge

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Little Rock's stormy integration dilemma has focused the spotlight on a federal judge who describes himself as a one-time "humdrum" lawyer, and a school superintendent who finds his man-in-the-middle role a familiar one. The judge is Ronald N. Davies, of Fargo, N.D., who was suddenly thrown into the segregation case. The superintendent is Virgil Blossom, veteran southern school administrator. Davies, 52, was assigned to Little Rock two weeks ago to clear up authorities in Little Rock have this day been discussing plans to take into custody by force the head of a sovereign state.

a logjam of cases caused by the recent retirement of U.S. District Judge Thomas C. Trimble. There was no hint at that time that Davies would become a national figure overnight.

The 50-year-old Blossom two years ago steered the charting of a plan for gradual integration of Little Rock schools. Some praised him for his "gradualism"—although that's a nasty word among integration advocates. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People criticized him for such a slow approach.

Blossom's plan to first integrate at high school level met federal court approval but crowds of up raise, only last Friday.

Blossom, a 6-2, 250 pounder, shared an interest in athletics. Davies which is 5-1, once ran 100 yards in 10 seconds while a member of the University of North Dakota track team—a feat when he was a college student.

Blossom was keenly interested in sports when he attended Missouri Valley College, where he took a Master of Science Degree in school administration. He once held the job of athletic director at Fayetteville High School and held a similar position at Okmulgee, Okla., in 1935-1937.

Blossom became school principal at Fayetteville in 1938, was promoted to superintendent in 1941, and was appointed Little Rock superintendent in 1953.

Judge Davies was assigned a few days ago to hear cases in the Eastern District of Arkansas until Feb. 24, 1958. The order assigning him was filed Aug. 21 by Chief Judge Archibald K. Gardner of the 8th United States Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis and went into effect Aug. 24.

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) has criticized the Eisenhower administration for delay in choosing a permanent judge.

Since his temporary appointment, Judge Davies twice has ruled that Little Rock's Central High School must be integrated. He told a reporter after one of the decisions: "I wish I could brag about something in my career. I guess I was a humdrum lawyer."

Both Davies and Blossom are family men. The jurist and his wife have five daughters and the Blossom family includes two teenage daughters, one of them a student at Central High School, the focal point of the current integration trouble.

Segregation Case Starts in Dallas

DALLAS (AP)—Federal Judge William Watwell ordered the long-smoldering Dallas segregation case brought before him a third time today.

Judge Atwell twice has ruled the Dallas independent school district should be allowed more time to study the problems of desegregation. Both rulings were reversed by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

The case stems from an attempt by 21 Negro children to enroll in white schools two years ago today.

Russia Bids for Airline Agreement

By HELMAN MORIN
McGUIRE AIR FORCE BASE N.J. (AP)—Russia is bidding for a commercial airline agreement with the United States and American airmen expressed unsolicited admiration today for the Soviet jet transport that has made the trip from Moscow.

The TU104, silvery, big-bodied and powerful, set down at McGuire Air Force Base last night, the first Russian passenger airliner ever to land in the United States.

Promptly, highly placed Soviet officials read a prepared statement from the steps of the ramp: "Let this flight be the beginning of regular flights between the Soviet Union and the United States," he said. "Hall to the friendship of the Soviet and American peoples."

By special agreement, the TU104 brought 40 people—mainly members of the Russian delegation to the United Nations—across the 5,670-mile route from Moscow to the Air Force base in New Jersey.

Fill-in Show Gets Going, Then Goes Off

By WILLIAM EWALD NEW YORK (UP).—There is a gag currently making the rounds about a new TV set so powerful it can pull in "Pantomime Quiz" in the winter.

"Mike Stokely, pitcher and emcee of the show that has been pinch-hitting almost as many summers as Enoch Slaughter, isn't sure whether he's flattered or annoyed by the crack.

"I suppose it's a pretty good sign that after 10 years as the perennial summer replacement, people are talking about us," said Stokely today. "Still, it's a terribly frustrating thing to have a show like this, just when we start getting viewers, off we go."

For the past 10 summers, Stokely and his TV brainchild, "Pantomime Quiz," have dropped into the TV schedule with awe-inspiring regularity. The show, a variation of the parlor game, charades, had gambled on all three major networks and the old DuMont web. Friday night, Stokely and the show, currently roistering on CBS-TV, take their final outing of the season and go into hibernation again.

"Why aren't we on in the winter? Well, I wish I had the answer," moaned Stokely. "Right now, we're drawing the highest mail count in our history—15,000 letters a week. And the first Nielsen Rating gave us a 17.8—and you know how high that is for a summer rating."

"The reason may be that the networks don't make anything on the show. They try to sell their own packages first to advertisers. Or else they try to sell high-budgeted shows to sponsors—shows that call for big sets that the networks can build and make money on; shows that call for lots of camera rehearsal, another item the networks and make money on.

"The budget of 'Pantomime Quiz' is only $9,500. We have no elaborate sets and no camera rehearsal. The networks just don't stand to make much money with our show—so off we go when the fall comes."

Stokely, 38, and a product of Shreveport, La., will take a one-month trip to Europe with his wife when "Pantomime Quiz" folds.

"There has been some talk of action with the show this winter," said Stokely. "There's a chance we may film 25 of them and syndicate them or that we might even land a spot on a network later on when other shows start to fold. 'The thing is, I've had lots of experience with this sort of talk over many years. And we still only come on as a summer replacement. I guess the trouble is that 'Pantomime Quiz' has been on for so many summers now that people automatically think of it as a summer show and nothing else."

"What I'd like to do is get a second show going. A one-show operation that takes place only in the summer is a kind of miserable thing."

DOROTHY DIX

Holier-Than-Thou Types Elicit No Holy Praises

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am very much disturbed about this problem and would appreciate your opinion.

My sister married a widower with three children at the time of the marriage six years ago the girls were 11, 9 and the boy was three. The boy presents no problem, but the girls have plenty. The older, Marilyn, ran off and got married at fifteen and has a baby. The young one is running wild, and will probably follow in her sister's footsteps. Marilyn has a good husband, but she is not the domestic type. She definitely doesn't care for the baby, parks the child with my sister for days on end and just seems to forget about him. My sister would like to adopt the baby, but the girl says "no." I feel my sister is encouraging her in irresponsibility. If a girl is old enough to bear a child she is old enough to care for it. My right hand man, I give her advice, but don't you think I'm right? My husband, children and home come before anything else for me. Everyone else should feel the same. Too many young mothers spend time gadding about when they should be taking care of their families.

Look closely at your own affairs; isn't there anything that should be corrected in your model household? Labor in your own vineyard and if your sister wants help with her problems, they'll be very carefully considered if she writes me!

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm very much interested in an internecine at our local hospital. I was introduced to him a month ago, and have seen him just a few times since. I'd love to know him better.

Dear Leatrice: So, probably, would most of the nurses and single women patients in the hospital. An internecine's life is quite busy one and doesn't include much time for recreation. Also, there young men are usually handicapped financially. So, with little time and less money I doubt if the boy would be a social asset. However, if you must know him better, develop an interesting friend. At least, you'll arouse his professional interest.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My mother recently married a man several years younger than she. Now, he and I are deeply in love and last week I learned I am pregnant. We are afraid to tell my mother the child is his. What should we do and how can we expect her to take it?

Dear Baffled: If she has normal responses, she'll toss both of you out.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My girl friend is very much in love with a boy who is six years older than she, and very, very jealous. Three weeks ago, they broke up. I know they want to make up, but neither will make the first move. Is there anyway I can help the situation?

Dear Junnita: Yes, leave them alone! They are better apart than constantly squabbling over petty things. Furthermore, a jealous suitor is no fun for a 16-year-old girl. Help her circulate among her own group.

have been made public before they reach him.

The press secretary said he did not know for sure whether that rule would be followed in this case. But he did say, in reply to a question that in any event Faubus will get a reply—if not from the President himself, from an aide.

Hagerly said he talked by telephone early this morning with Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell, who was in Washington. The press secretary said the substance of the conference was just what he later told newsmen—that reports federal authorities have discussed taking Faubus into custody were "not correct."

Hagerly said either he or the President would be in touch with Brownell by phone again later in the day regarding the Little Rock situation.

He noted Brownell already had announced that the facilities of the FBI, had been made available for an investigation of suspension of school integration at a Little Rock high school.

Prescott News

Avery-Harris Vows Pledged
The First Methodist Church of Prescott was the scene at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon of the marriage of Miss Shelby Jean Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Harris, to Donald Avery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Avery.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Alfred DeBlack. The altar was banked with palms and beauty vases of gladiolus. Branched candelabra held white tapers, which were lighted by Mike Stevens of Blevins and Arlis Honea of Hope. Mrs. Kenneth Ledbetter was organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Custer Harris, wore a gown of Chantilly lace over satin, with neckline edged in medallions of lace embroidered in seed pearls. Her fingertip veil of tulle was caught to a jeweled coronet. She carried a cascade of pink feathered chrysanthemums and white carnations, on a satin covered Bible.

Maid of honor was Miss Carolyn Harris, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Miss Evorie Stuart and Miss Sophie McKelvy. Their identical dresses of light blue crystalline over taffeta were fashioned with full waist-length skirts and scooped necklines. They wore matching bandeaux of blue leaves, and carried nosegays of pink carnations. Similarly attired was little Miss Vicki Cornelius, niece of the bride, who was flower girl.

Rolfie Wylie of Prescott was best man. Groomsmen were Arlis Honea and Mike Stevens. Mrs. Harris wore for her daughter's wedding a blue lace frock. Mrs. Avery was attired in a dress of navy blue crepe. Both mothers wore corsages of pink feathered chrysanthemums.

A reception was held in the church social hall, following the ceremony. The reception table was covered with white net and organza over white taffeta, and edged with white satin bows. Serving at the reception were Mrs. Carter Harris, sister-in-law of the bride, Miss Frances Avery, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Virginia Purdie had charge of the guest book.

When the couple left for a trip to the Ozarks, Mrs. Avery was wearing a blue cotton frock and blue accessories. Flowers from her bridal bouquet were pinned at her shoulder.

The couple will live in Arkadelphia, where he will attend Henderson State Teacher's College.

The living room mantle was banked with green plants and a planter filled with vari-colored zinnias. Arrangements of summer flowers were placed at vantage points throughout the house.

Miss Lillie Butcher served punch and Mrs. Roy Loomis served white and pink individual cakes from a table covered with a lace cloth and centered with zinnias, bachelor buttons, dahlias in shades of pink and rose in a crystal bowl. The buffet was graced with a floral arrangement of zinnias and bachelor buttons.

THE CANVAS DAGGER

by HELEN REILLY

THE STORY: Despite warnings, Sarah Casement continues to probe into the death of Grant Melville, who may have been murdered. She goes to Casa God where Melville painted the picture of a woman who is helping Melville's widow do a biography on the dead painter.

CHAPTER X

Steven had come to take Sarah over for dinner as he asked Gillespie to join them later. The house seemed curiously still when they were gone. The thought of the endless empty rooms was dismaying. Sarah jumped and dropped her lipstick when the kitchen door opened. It was Tom Gillespie. He had forgotten his shotgun.

What Tom Gillespie had really come back for was to warn her. At the high lattice gate, with his hand on the latch, he said quietly, "You came up here to find out all you could about Grant Melville. The only way you can find out is by asking questions. My advice is—don't. If there was something phony about Melville's death—if the fellow who bumped him off could be here."

She said all right, looking up at him. He was looking down at her. And the moment was there between them, a moment that had nothing to do with the late Grant Melville. Last night when he bent and kissed her he had been aloof.

grave, almost detached. He wasn't now. Neither was she. Nothing like this had ever happened to her before.

The vividness and intensity of the moment, their awareness of each other, so sharp as to touch the edge of pain, was broken in on abruptly. Someone was coming along the road humming a tune. It was Florie Brown, a friend of Carlotta's who lived up the road and whose husband worked under Steven at the Co's and Bradford plant in South Cornwall.

"Sarah Casement!" she exclaimed, blonde bob over her shoulders and smiling her wide, flashing smile. "I heard you were here. It's all around town—you know this town. You can't turn over in bed without everybody knowing it." She laughed her contempt and dislike of Cornwall aloud.

Florie would have been a very pretty girl except for a slight cleft in one eye. She wasn't more than 19 and she was noisy and trashy. She and her husband were a couple of crazy kids who envied the neighborhood by their constant quarrels.

"I know all about you too, Mr. Gillespie. You're writing a life of Grantie, aren't you? Ha—if people only knew—the old footsie player! Butler wouldn't melt in his mouth when that cow of a wife of his was around, oh, no—but I could tell you plenty about him. Going to Carlotta's tonight!"

They both said they were and then Florie and Tom went on together and Sarah closed the gate and started up the driveway. She crossed the flood-lit grass above, noting abstractedly that the roses badly needed pruning; they were a wilderness almost obscuring the four front windows and the front door. The vines were in disorder. Sarah moved closer, stood still, and stared down.

Tom Gillespie had driven the afternoon out of her head; it came back with a rush. Someone or something had come through the vines from inside the house, half a dozen long, thorny streamers trailed outward on the grass, and there were crushed leaves and breaks in the stems where the vines had been torn roughly aside. Carlotta had said that some man or other had come over to borrow Grace's punch bowl 10 days ago and had probably forgotten to close the door firmly behind him. These breaks looked fresh.

When she went in she turned on all the lights, made sure that the bolts leading to the little entrance hall and the stairs were in place, and dressed in a hurry. She, through the little pine grove, snatched on her earrings as she moved along the Tasker's porch.

She had intended to tell Steven and Carlotta about the broken vines and her conviction that there had been someone in the stone house that afternoon, but the weren't alone. Two other couples were dining with them. Mr. and Mrs. Satterlee were already there.

The woman who had been Grant Melville's first wife was somnolently handsome and haggard in jeans and a red pullover. She was helping Carlotta set the table. She gave Sarah a casual greeting, recalled meeting her in the summer. Felix Satterlee was more ceremonious. He was a tall, fresh-faced man in his early sixties with iron-gray hair and a pleasant manner. He left the third dressing he was concocting to come and shake hands with her and ask about Grace.

Steven was stirring something in a big pot on the stove. It was his penicillin. He made her taste it, watching her anxiously.

During dinner at the lace-covered, candlelit table the talk ranged idly. There had been another spy scare at the Coast Guard station. A perfectly innocent man had been arrested.

"The officials out there are fools," Satterlee said disgustedly. "They're uniform-nappy. The other side knows all about what goes on, all there is to know, but if the people here ask a simple question, they're slapped behind bars. Most of this security stuff is as ridiculous as it is naive."

Steven didn't agree.

Cheap Dress Is Just as Good a Buy

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD designer Boh Loper made an admission today that could well upset the economy of the fashion world, but it's the kind of news husbands like to hear.

"I'm the only designer in the business who shows a dress for $39.95 along with one that sells for $3,995," he declared at the showing of his new fall collection.

"And I must honestly admit that the $39.95 dress is just as good a buy as the expensive one. The same thought, same workmanship, often the same materials, go into the cheaper one."

There is only one difference, according to Loper, and that is he makes a thousand of the $39.95 models but only one of the expensive design.

Loper, designer for many of the movies' biggest names, makes another point for husbands.

"Any dress, whether it costs $39.95 or $5,000, should last a woman five years at the minimum."

Unlike Paris designers, Loper never changes the hemlines of his creations.

"The shape of women's legs never change style. The most flattering part of the leg is midcalf, and that's where my dresses stay."

The American designer declared open warfare with the new French chemise look, a throwback to the styles of the roaring Twenties.

"The whole French line looks like a burlesque of the Twenties and how can you burlesque an era that was a burlesque in itself? One Dior evening creation looks like something Ben-Little might wear for a sketch in the second act of a jazz age revue."

Loper's new collection shows no tampering with the natural silhouette.

"I unlike Dior and the rest of Paris, abide by the biological fact that a woman's bosom is in front and her waistline in the middle," he said.

"My clothes curve; where my customers curve."
